Editor's Note

Laura M. Tobey, Esq., tobey@tobeylawoffices.com

Spring is finally in full swing, and this issue discusses topics like moving in together and organization skills. And as summer, and the busiest wedding season, approaches, making sure that your last will and testament is also on that to-do list is a must. After the flowers, cake and other decisions are made, many of my clients are shocked to learn that if your spouse dies without a Will, his or her estate will pass via the rules of intestacy, which could mean that a portion of the estate pass to his or her parents. So, after that last dance and your honeymoon, make sure you draft that document to ensure that your wishes are followed and that your estate passes exactly as you want.

Radnor Activity Center

at Sulpizio Gym

FACILITY INFORMATION

The Radnor Activity Center at Sulpizio Gym (RAC) is an indoor gymnasium where members of the community can both rent the facility for their private usage and participate in a wide variety of programs organized by the Radnor Township Recreation and Community Programming Department. The building was part of the former Radnor Middle School and through a lease agreement with Radnor Township School District, the Township now manages the facility.

The building was named in honor of Louis J. Sulpizio, a former educator, coach, and administrator with Radnor Township School District. Mr. Sulpizio was born and raised in Wayne and was a graduate of Radnor High School. He joined the school district in 1951 and during his tenure, he taught history, coached all sports, and retired as the Radnor Middle School Assistant Principal in 1983.

The RAC is located at 125 South Wayne Avenue in beautiful downtown Wayne, directly behind the Radnor Fire Company. Renovated in 2016, it is a full-size gymnasium facility offering a dynamic space for many forms of recreational programming.

Parking is available in the municipal lot across the street from the Radnor Fire Company. Please do not park in the Fire Company parking lot. Parking in the Radnor Township School District lot is available during off-school hours only.

Located at 810 Conestoga Road, Bryn Mawr, this linear park spans 9.4 acres and was purchased in 1958 for inclusion in the Township's park system. Initial construction of the original amenities featured at the park was completed in 1968. Every summer, the park is well known for hosting the Garrett Hill 4th of July Parade and Picnic Celebration. A variety of active and passive recreation takes place at the park year-round as it is suitable for a wide-range of outdoor pursuits including tennis (courts are also lined for pickleball), basketball, baseball, soccer, family gatherings, picnicking, and nature walks.

The Park's First Major Improvement Effort

A community-based master plan process began in 2014 to evaluate a new layout of the park. After two years of discussions and planning, a comprehensive project took shape in 2017 to renovate and redesign many of the park's existing amenities including the basketball court, tennis courts, playground, parking lot, comfort station, and war memorial along with creating new park features such as the 0.4 mile walking path that spans the entire footprint of the park, a bandshell, and a picnic pavilion. Sustainable and green features were also incorporated park-wide and served as a backbone for the park's entire design and construction effort - an effort being recognized by the Pennsylvania Department of Conservation and Natural Resources!

Uniqueness is Its Specialty

Not only does the park capture an intense amount of active and passive recreational opportunities for everyone in a relatively small space, the park is also situated in one of the densest neighborhoods in Radnor Township (Garrett Hill) – this means many of the park's avid users can walk or ride their bikes to get there. A war memorial dawns the site's entrance and aptly celebrates fallen heroes from the Korean War and World War II. Further homage is paid near the park's massive playground to Garrett Hill Native, Janice Grant Berenstain, who is co-author and creator of the legendary children's books, the Berenstain Bears.

DCNR will present the Township with the Green Park Award this summer! More information to follow soon. We hope you will be able to join us on this special day!

MEET YOUR FIREFIGHTER

DENNIS NUNAN

Photography by Damien Enderle

Name: Dennis Nunan

Rank Now with Radnor Fire Company: Firefighter

Profession: Autobody Mechanic

When did you join RFC? I joined Radnor Fire Company in June of 2015.

Why did you become a firefighter? My father is retired fire chief with Highland Park 26 in Upper Darby. I was always exposed to the fire service as a young kid and I found both challenge and the excitement to be very rewarding. Also, firefighting is a true brotherhood and that has given me the opportunity to meet and make so many new friends and colleagues.

What is your job on the emergency scene? Depending upon what type of incident we are responding to, I have many roles from extinguishing fire to helping with fire scene coordination and working with other firefighters at accident scenes. That is exactly what makes firefighting so exciting is that every incident and call is different and requires many roles and responsibilities.

What certifications do you hold?

- Firefighter 1
- Vehicle Rescue
- Emergency Vehicle Operator
- Pump Operations

What makes Radnor Fire Company unique? Radnor Fire Company is a very diverse group of individuals. From the old to the young, to the professional to working class members, RFC encompasses all walks of our community. I feel there is a really good working relationship between the Fire Company and the community based on the support we get at events, open houses and the various educational activities we do in the area.

What do you love about Wayne/Radnor Township? Radnor is an awesome place to live and there is so much to do. In this area you have the horse show, great sports teams like Villanova and wide array of restaurants and bars that make Wayne a great place to meet friends.

Why should local residents consider volunteering at Radnor Fire Company?

Radnor Fire Company is a great way to serve your community and be a part of something that is vital to the well-being of everyone in the area. We run an average of more than 750 fire calls a year and more than 2,200 EMS calls, and we are largely a volunteer organization. But we are also a business, and we have an executive staff and board of directors who are all volunteers with backgrounds and experience in a number of professions. For those interested in joining the fire company or who would like to help, I encourage you to visit our website www.radnorfire.com – or stop by the station any Monday evening at 7 p.m., rain or shine, for our weekly drills and meetings.

Silver Spotlight Connie Legge

— A Jewel In Our Community

Susan Shapiro, susan_wsc@yahoo.com

Constance Helena was born in 1948 at Bryn Mawr Hospital and raised right in our own backyard, Havertown. She is the oldest of four. Her family loved the name Constance so much, five women were given the name!

Connie working out at Wayne Senior Center

Unfortunately, Connie's dad, Bob Brennan, died when Connie was only 8 years old, and her baby sister was only 2 years old. The young family was certainly facing some difficult times. Connie remembers learning to be frugal and to this day makes it a practice not to waste anything. This is a lesson to all of us: When you see someone save the wrapping paper on his gift, don't be too quick to judge. You never know what some people go through during their lives. Connie is definitely a proponent of "waste not, want not."

However, Connie's mother was able to get various part-time jobs over the years to help supplement their income from Social Security and her husband's Veterans' Benefits. She drove a bus for a kindergarten for a while and worked as a secretary for the Swell Bubble Gum Factory in Havertown. Here's a little trivia for you: Swell manufactured Bazooka Bubble Gum until 2003. Remember the comics we all saved from the wrappers! Did you keep any? Of course, they are very collectible! Unfortunately, this author did not save any!

Connie herself worked in various jobs beginning at the age of 16 in what we would now refer to as an old-fashioned soda shop. She graduated from Chatham Park High School and went on to Northeastern Christian College where she earned an associate's degree in Liberal Arts. She also met her future husband, Bill Legge, at the school. In fact, Connie was named Homecoming Queen and became engaged on her birthday in 1968. What a day!

Connie and Bill had two children, Bill in 1969 and Jan in 1971. Connie held various positions in the area. However, she really found her niche when she began working in the medical field in 1976. She was an assistant to the school nurse while her children were attending school. She became very competent in the billing field in medical offices and for insurance companies. She moved on to become an office manager for a Hematology and Oncology practice in Paoli where she worked until her retirement in October 2017.

Did Connie foresee a retirement filled with lunch dates and taking it easy? Absolutely not! She saw it as an opportunity to spend more time helping others. She increased her time volunteering for a nonprofit dedicated to helping teen moms, Young Lives. She even began writing grants to support the organization. For three years Connie has also been working on a film, From Liberty to Captivity, which highlights the tragedy of human trafficking in Pennsylvania. This hateful business is a multi-billion dollar industry in our country. Connie is the associate producer. You can find out more about these worthy causes by checking their websites.

Connie is also a deacon at her church, The Church of the Savior. In this role she provides others with compassionate care and mentors those in need.

What does Connie do to keep herself in shape to have the energy to work so hard on these altruistic pursuits? Well, she found Wayne Senior Center, which she calls a hidden jewel in our community. She was looking for exercise classes and is now volunteering to lead a Friendly Calling Outreach Program, sponsored by WSC, for older adults who are homebound temporarily or for an extended time.

Actually, Connie is the hidden jewel in our community, doing good wherever she goes!

Connie enjoying her 70th birthday celebration with good friends

Honoring your past, protecting your future.

THE MARGARET GEORGE SCHOOL AND CHILDCARE CENTER

Where love and learning go hand in hand.

The mission of the Margaret George School is to provide love and respect in a stimulating environment where children are encouraged to reach their potential in all areas of development: social, emotional, physical and intellectual. Each child is an individual with inestimable worth, both as an individual and as a member of society.

Following the guidelines set forth by the National Association for the Education of Young Children, we apply the knowledge of child development to our curriculum and policies to ensure that programs are developmentally appropriate for each age group and each individual child. Our teachers prepare environments so that children may learn through active exploration and interaction with adults, other children and materials.

Children are treated with respect. Our staff responds quickly and directly to children's needs, desires, and messages, adapting their responses to each child's differing style and abilities. Whenever possible, children are given choices fostering development of self-control. Our staff facilitates the development of self-esteem by respecting, accepting, and comforting children regardless of their behavior. Conflicts are resolved respectfully, taking into account each child's needs at the time. Our staff follows the guidelines developed by Rudolf Dreikurs in his books, Children, the Challenge (with Vicki Stolz, R.N.) and Discipline Without Tears (with Paul Cassel)

Your Guide To SPRING Organizing

INTERIOR DESIGN ON THE MAIN LINE
Larina Kase, larina@larinakaseid.com

Larina Kase

Carrie Kauffman

Photography by Jon Friedrich.

Spring is finally here (and almost summer), and one of my favorite things is spring cleaning. Well, not the cleaning part of course, but getting organized. Design and organization go hand in hand because it's hard to have a well-designed space that isn't organized. You'll notice the clutter instead of the beautiful design, and we can't have that!

I recently had Carrie Kauffman of Carrie's Essential Services over to help me organize my basement. She is so talented and good at organization, so I asked her for her spring organization to-do list, and here's what she said.

Carrie's Getting-Organized Mental Checklist

As a professional organizer working in clients' homes, it's always the same spaces that need the most attention come spring ... closets! Regardless of what space you are focused on, it's important to have the right mindset and strategy. Here are my Top 5 organizing mindset skills to hone this spring:

1. BE COMMITTED.

Change of season. Change of habits. Organized living is ... exactly that ... a lifestyle. A mindset. It requires planning and systems. Over time, the work of organizing becomes less time-consuming if you commit to de-clutter and make decisions as you work through each space. Don't just move items from one room to another.

2. BE DECISIVE.

The number-one reason that people delay organizing a cluttered space is inability to decide. It can be hard to let go. So, instead of having to decide, the clutter continues to move around your home, from one space to another. You must decide for every item – keep, toss, donate or consign.

3. BE PREPARED.

Do you simply remove the clutter and toss it into a spare bedroom? This is not organizing. Use labeled bags or bins to sort your seasonal clutter. Once the bins are full, bag up the items for their final destination. If storing, be sure to wash, dry clean, fold and store neatly and out of sight. This will make these items easy to find and accessible when you're ready to reverse this process next winter. Tupperware containers, my label maker, and vacuum-seal storage bags are products that I use in homes and offices every day!

4. BE THOROUGH.

The feeling you get when you de-clutter and organize a large space is undeniable. You feel lighter, energized and motivated. So, don't stop there. Tackling the small spaces and finding great products to keep your car, handbag, sports gear, shower, kitchen counter organized can feel just as rewarding! Keep going. One space at a time.

5. BE IN THE KNOW.

My clients call on my expert advice on WHERE to donate and consign. They ask for local resources, charitable organizations, women's shelters, drop spots, popular consignment sales, who takes big electronics, and when the local recycling events take place. It's my job to be in the know and advise my clients when it comes to the best local resources.

Living and working in a freshly organized space can be quite liberating! You will feel it in your body and mind! Less stress. More energy. Higher productivity. Better design. Bring these spaces back to life! Get moving, and get organized!

Before You Move In Together

As spring fever hits, romance blossoms, and leases expire, more couples begin to consider moving in together. This joint venture comes with its share of risks and benefits, some of which might surprise you. For homeowners and renters alike, it is important to get all of the information before making a decision.

WHY COHABITATE?

Some couples are ready to take the next step and transition their relationship to a full-time status. We have heard from many women that moving in together allowed them to combine resources and get to know each other in a way that living separately does not. The convenience of living together means more time as a couple, sharing household chores and even splitting pet or child-care duties more easily. If the individuals each live alone, a shared home may also mean shared bills and a decreased financial burden for each party. Some car insurance policies will even combine your policy when cohabitating, reducing premium costs, according to Sarah Todd, Insurance Producer at Element Risk Management in West Chester.

IS YOUR RELATIONSHIP READY?

While the financial and practical benefits of cohabitation are alluring, even happy and secure couples can face major adjustment issues with this transition. "Even the healthiest relationships have disagreements," says Danielle Bills, LSW, Social Services Coordinator for Domestic Abuse Project of Delaware County. "Therefore, having these discussions ... when things are going well can make for better negotiations and compromises during disagreements and times of stress."

How do you know if your relationship can withstand this adjustment? Start by talking. Ask your partner to discuss with you how you would both handle issues like the following situations:

Who will directly pay the mortgage or rent and utilities?

How will you manage groceries and cleaning?

Will expenses be shared 50/50 or by another ratio?

How often do you expect to have guests? Will you clear these invitations with the other party ahead of time?

How often do you expect to go out without your partner?

Do either of you want restrictions on who or what can enter the home?

These conversations may feel tense, but will help establish the expectations going in to cohabitation. If you can't agree on solutions, you may not be good candidates for living together. But it's more than just the answers that can help you make a decision; the process of this discussion can be illuminating and provide insight into important parts of your partner's personality. Stay aware of defensiveness, jealousy or anger, and also take note if your partner agrees too easily to all of your preferences, just to make the move happen. If respect, honesty and open communication aren't in place at the start, consider that a red flag and don't move in together.

What Are the Right Answers?

While some of these topics are resolved based solely on personal preference ("I don't want smoking in the home"), some have legal and financial implications to be aware of. The risks and benefits of cohabitation vary greatly depending on whether you are the homeowner, non-owner or renting together. Below are a few considerations for all.

Homeowner:

If you own a home and are considering inviting your partner to move in, plan carefully. "Before making any decisions around cohabitating, ensure that you have an agreement in place that protects you if things change in your life or your relationship," suggests Timothy Hewitt, CFP, Senior Wealth Advisor at The Wiley Group. He explains that once a partner moves in, whether or not they pay rent, they may be able to claim "tenant status," which means that if the relationship ends or you want them to move out for any reason, you may have to follow a formal eviction process, which can take 90 days.

On the plus side, any extra income – in the form of rent or shared payments – could potentially allow you to pay down your mortgage faster or invest in valuable home improvements. You'll want to check with an accountant about the tax implications of receiving rent.

Non-owner:

As a non-owner moving into a partner's home, you don't assume the risks of homeownership. You should be added to the homeowner's insurance policy as an "Other Member of the Household," suggests Sarah Todd, and if the policy does not have this provision, take out a renter's insurance policy to protect yourself.

Taxes, mortgage, repairs and maintenance costs fall on the shoulders of the homeowner, legally speaking. But in long-term relationships, the other party often contributes. Amy VanGelder of Price Financial in Wayne, proposes that if the non-owner is contributing to any home improvements, they pay for these out of a sole-owned bank account, rather than a joint account. That way, "If they part ways in the future, the non-owner would have their financial interest protected."

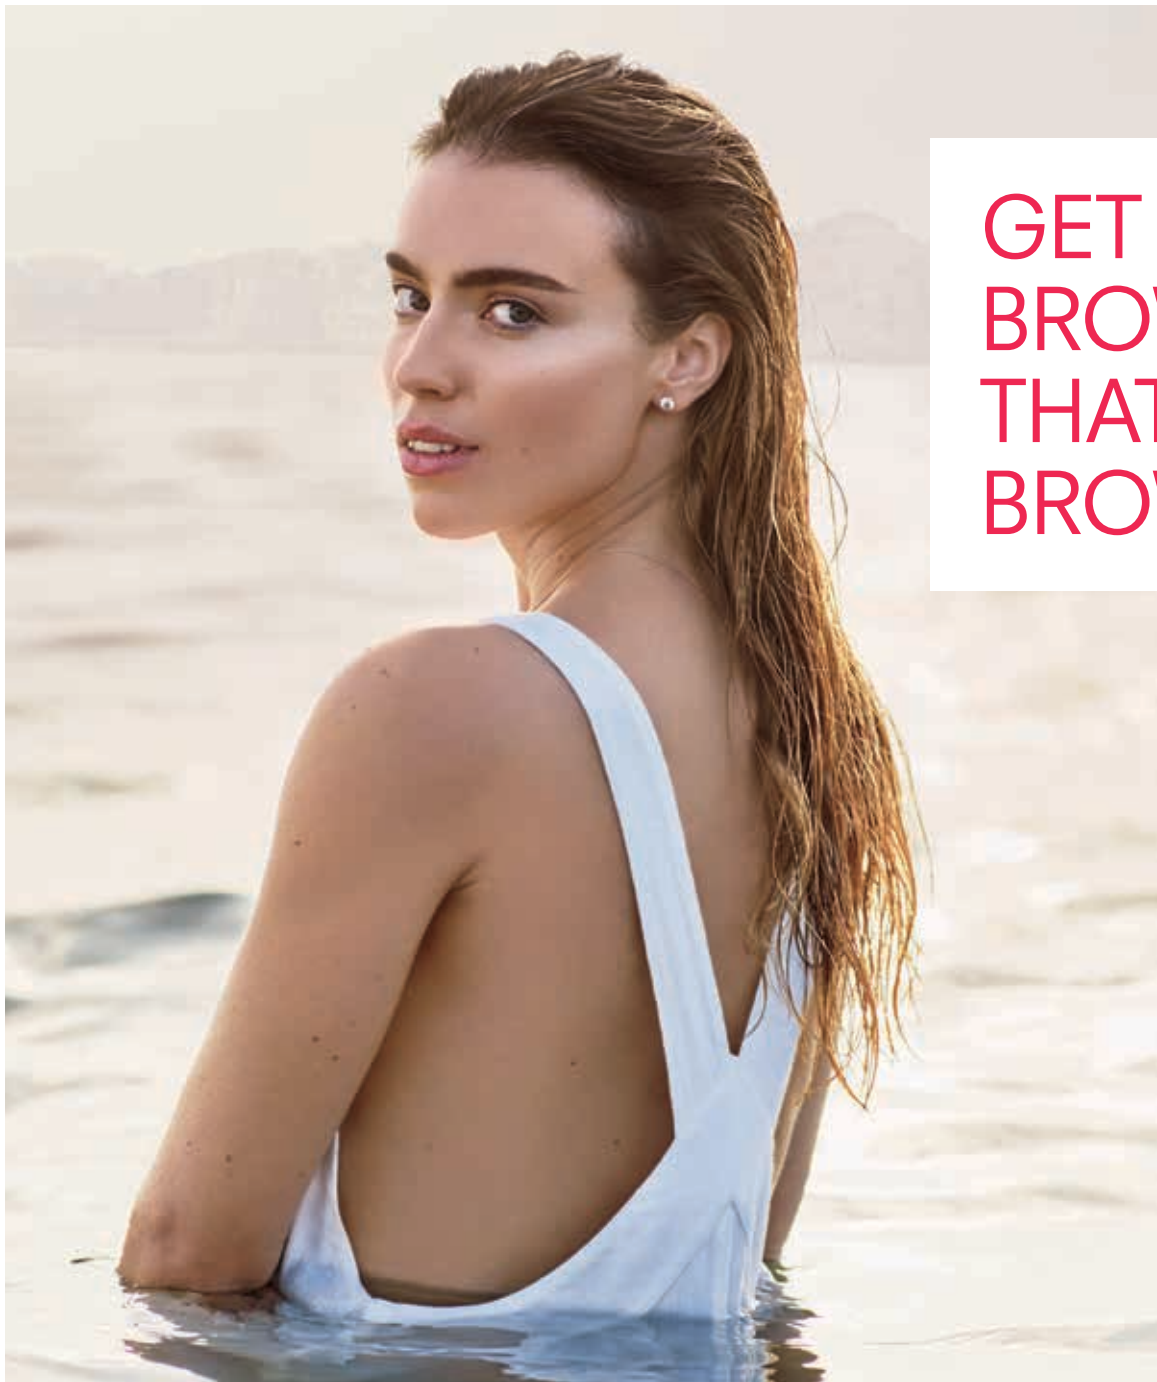

Another thing to know as a non-owner is that if you haven't established yourself as a tenant in the home, you could be asked to leave at any moment without a formal eviction process. It may be wise to change your address and begin receiving mail there.

"At any point," says VanGelder, "the non-owner can be added to the title or the mortgage, and then has ownership interest in the home." You will be subject to some taxes and fees, but would have the protection of a property settlement agreement if you part ways in the future.

Renters:

If you are renting together, be aware that neither party can force the other out. A landlord can follow a formal eviction process if they have grounds to do so. But in that case, both parties may be evicted simultaneously. If the rent is not being paid – for any reason – this will impact both parties' credit.

Now that you're better informed, you can make a decision and plan for what works best for you. For information, guidance or support with a life transition, please phone the Helpline at Women's Resource Center: 610-687-6391.
